Oriental motifs influence sophisticated lamp designs

1, 2 EXCELSIOR ART STUDIOS, 18 West 18 Street, New York, offers two decorative table lamps. The 3-way lamp in example 1 is of white frosted glass with leaves edged in gold, standing on a white wood base. The outside of the deep double shade is in "Malaka" caning, the interior in white fiberglass. Overall height is 46 inches; retail price is $45. Photograph 2 shows four columns in persimmon with brass decorations on a marble base. These support a top of white wrought iron and polished brass. Combined with a deep opaque shade in persimmon, the lamp retails for $57.

3, 4 LIGHTOLIER, INC., 11 East 36 Street, New York, is showing additional important designs by Italian designer, Maurizio Tempestini. The collection, which includes 25 new designs, has tremendous inspirational scope, and makes use of many different forms, from slender shapes in walnut or wrought iron to massively-scaled ceramic pieces. The latter comprises the more important portion of the group. Our selection includes a lamp (photograph 3) inspired by an oriental jug, rendered in beige or turquoise ceramic. The shade is of Belgian casement linen, and it repeats the cut-out motif of a jug collar in its raised border design. A graceful bottle silhouette is imitated in example 4. Set on a high ebony pedestal, it achieves a strong sculptured feeling. Deep toned mottled turquoise ceramic is effectively contrasted by a white shade. Both lamps retail for about $135.

5, 6, 7, 8 BETH WEISSMAN COMPANY, INC., 46 West 23 Street, New York, proffers a series of exotic, beautiful lamps inspired and made by the Indian handicraft worker. The materials used, copper, brass, gold, silver, marble, produce lamp bases of dazzling intricacy and precision of design. Their regularity of pattern is flawless. We show from left to right Jolie, in red enamelwork blended with hand engraved silver, measuring 42 inches high; Maria, inspired by an oriental huka (water pipe), is worked in a combination of brass and ebony and stands 42 inches high. Sumaria, richly designed in silver and combined with ebony, stands 62 inches high; and Dorian, of shimmering silver and gold crystals in suspension, is 50 inches high. They retail for approximately $85, $85, $175 and $150 respectively.
